Training Center Names Top Civilians

SAN DIEGO - Training Support Center (TSC) San Diego announced Aug. 28 the selection of their Senior and Junior Civilian of the Quarter for the third quarter of fiscal year 2014.

Jack Jensen, a former Chief Aviation Ordnanceman, was selected as the Senior Civilian of the Quarter. "It feels very good to be recognized for a job well done," he said. "I really enjoy my job and if someone needs help, I'll always be there for them."

Jensen was recognized by the command as a model of effectiveness and efficiency while serving as TSC San Diego's facilities liaison for numerous Naval Education and Training Command and learning center sites in the Southern California area. Jensen is currently supervising more than 15 sustainment, restoration, and modernization projects in NETC facilities, including several major upgrades. He is also responsible for all area NETC base communications and a fleet of 47 government vehicles.

"His goal-oriented project management style and intensive coordination with customers and service providers has ensured positive results and exceptional productivity in all assigned projects," said TSC San Diego Commanding Officer

Capt. Robert Beauchamp. "It is truly a privilege and honor to have a person of his caliber working at TSC San Diego."

Kelvin Rosborough was recognized as the Junior Civilian of the Quarter for his superior performance and unselfish contributions to the administration department at TSC's Point Loma campus, where he streamlined the processing of all personnel security issues. He verifies all incoming students' background investigations and security clearances. He collaborated with the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) to establish connectivity to their Fingerprint Transaction System, enabling the command to submit fingerprints electronically. This collaboration was credited by OPM as eliminating the manual paper process, expediting processing time, improving image quality, and reducing human error.

"I was surprised, however I was both honored and pleased when selected as Junior Civilian of the Quarter," said Rosborough. "My selection demonstrates the command's initiatives in recognizing performance. Such an achievement would not have been possible without the trust of my superiors and support of my co-workers and shipmates."

"Kelvin is an exceptional employee and individual with whom I am thankful to have the opportunity to work every day," said Susan Ryder, TSC director of administration. "He brings enthusiasm and confidence to the workplace and never hesitates to assist a Sailor with their administrative needs. His performance and professionalism has truly been exceptional."

"Kelvin's take-charge attitude and innate ability to solve virtually any problem makes him an invaluable employee," added Beauchamp. "With the regular flow of new students through TSC, his job could be seen as never-ending, yet every Sailor is extraordinarily important, and Kelvin takes care of each one individually. His positive outlook and professional expertise have been tremendous assets to TSC San Diego.”

Training Support Center San Diego provides centralized student management and support to 18 Naval Education and Training Command Learning Sites in the Southwest region.
